Frieze, the highly acclaimed contemporary art fair, has returned to London. As per usual, beyond the entrance doors, a vibrant array of modern art awaits, featuring paintings, sculptures, installations and various other forms of infectious artistic expression.

But Frieze London offers more than just a visual feast. It provides a platform for exclusive talks, panel discussions and other events that delve into the world of contemporary art and its cultural significance. Moreover, the fair places a special emphasis on celebrating the very best female artists of our time. Of course, we couldn't resist the opportunity to handpick some of our favorite pieces by the remarkable women creatives showcased at the fair.

Our standout favorites include Emirati photographer Farah Al Qasimi; English conceptual artist Gillian Wearing; British painter Tahnee Lonsdale; Margate-based sculptor Lindsey Mendick; Chinese multimedia artist Cao Fei; multimedia South Korean artist Ayoung Kim; multidisciplinary Scottish artist Morag Keil; Swiss contemporary pop artist Sylvie Fleury; Serbian conceptual and performance artist Marina Abramović; and photo-based American artist Deana Lawson.

Keep scrolling to discover the artworks, alongside information about the galleries showcasing the pieces and the specific booth locations at the fair.
